Testimonial.

"There were times when attitudes were so hard and fast that I thought it would be an impossible task to create teams within groups of people that we were working with. Brian and Arthie with incredible insight and genuine humanity were able to find the chink in the armour and break down barriers that had been built for decades.

Here is a testimony to my experience working with Celebrating Humanity International.

"Our organization was facing a serious challenge: the German mother-company was putting the South African production unit under constant stress to implement change at a faster pace.

How do you combine German discipline, forward planning and hard work with the more multi-cultural-prized relationship-based way of working in Kwa-Zulu-Natal? The pressure was starting to erode the relationship within the team, tension was building up as the nerves were more and more blank. The Management team was losing it's unity as the pressure was putting every one's character in a corner that wasn't his.

We needed a solution. We were looking for someone to re-unite the team, to give us again a common ground.

I grew up in France from a French father and an American mother, worked a long deal of my professional life in Germany before coming out to South Africa.

From my experience in similar situations, we needed a team building exercise, but a special one. It should have a special local flavor, definitively avoid the "not invented here syndrome". It should be fun, based on understanding the one common thing we all have: cultural difference.

In our team, we are all from different backgrounds. It is a lot more than the Germany influence on the South African way of working.

So this is where Brian and Arthie came along, as if they have been waiting all this time to assist us with solving our problems.

Like the needle that finds the sore muscle, the experience of team finding and building experience was exactly what we needed. It was professional, it was fun, it was loaded with energy and it made us understand that a team is only as strong as it is diversified.

Well done Brian and thank you for this truly special experience!"
